

The Don Hutson Report

© 2019 Don Hutson

Global Expert on Sales & Negotiations

Volume 2020, No. 11

June 2, 2020

Wisdom from the Legends

(For the coming issues of The Don Hutson Report, be sure to check out our special offers at the end of the newsletter. Most are complimentary.)

This past Thursday, I got a subliminal message to re-read Orison Swett Marden's book, "Peace, Power and Plenty". I was busy and didn't get to it right away, but on Saturday morning the message hit me in the head with sufficient velocity that I went straight to the Marden section of my library, grabbed the book, and started reading.

This was almost a super-natural experience! It was as if the chapters I chose to read first were written just for me! Have you ever had that experience? I must say that it happens often with Dr. Marden's books. Here are some excerpts from that work that particularly transfixed me on the stellar content of this great author who walked our earth a good century ahead of his time! (He was born in 1848 and died in 1927.)

These excerpts are from his chapter entitled The Law of Opulence...

"We talk abundance here." I was struck with this motto in a New York office recently. I said to myself: "These people are prosperous because they expect prosperity; they do not recognize poverty or admit lacking anything they need."

"The great fundamental principle of the law of opulence is our inseparable connection with the creative energy of the universe. When we come into the full realization, we shall never want again. It is our sense of separateness from the Power that created us that makes us feel helpless. But as long as we limit ourselves by thinking that we are separate, insignificant, unrelated atoms in the universe; that the great supply, the creative energy is outside of us and that only a little of it in some mysterious way can be absorbed by a few people who are or fortunate, or lucky, we shall never come into that abundant supply which is our birthright."

“The creator never put vast multitudes of people on this earth to scramble for a limited supply, as though He were not able to furnish enough for all. We should live in the realization that there is an abundance of power where our present power comes from, and that we can draw from this great source for as much as we can use!”

“There is something wrong when people are so worried and absorbed in making a living that they cannot make a life. We were made for happiness, to express joy and gladness, to be prosperous. The trouble with us is that we do not trust the law of infinite supply, but close our natures so that abundance cannot flow to us. Abundance follows a law as strict as that of mathematics. If we obey it we get the flow; if we strangle it we cut it off. There is abundance waiting for everyone on the globe.”

“People who put themselves into harmony with the law of opulence harvest a fortune, while those who do not in many cases do not find enough to keep them alive. There is everything in feeling opulent. We must think plenty before we can realize it in life.”

I consider Dr. Orison Marden my literary mentor. He passed on decades before I was born, but his messages are still alive in me and millions of others. He was a true champion of living a positive, abundant life, and I am thankful for his inspired influence!

See Don's short video on "Pandemic Recovery Business Strategies for Leaders". Go to <https://vimeo.com/416585758>. You will get several good ideas to productively deal with challenges you face while coming out of these difficult times.

Don Hutson's Cloud Convention SPECIAL OFFER

Don recently presented 3 Webinars as a part of the nationwide Cloud Convention presentation. His Special Product Offer for that event is now available to you for only $49.00.

Just click on the image below.

Click on the image above for more information about this special offer.

Don Hutson is a #1 NY Times and Wall Street Journal
International Best-selling author, a Hall of Fame speaker, and CEO of U.S. Learning based in Memphis, TN

www.DonHutson.com

901-767-5700